Kiel / Mölln (dpa / lno) - On the 28th anniversary of the right-wing arson attacks in Mölln, the chairman of the Turkish community in Schleswig-Holstein (TGS-H), Cebel Küçükkaraca, called for more rigor against right-wing radicalism and racism.

Right-wing extremists spread inhuman attitudes on the Internet and in public.

This threat situation should not be ignored during the Corona crisis, said Küçükkaraca on Monday.

On the night of November 23, 1992, two neo-Nazis had thrown incendiary devices at two houses inhabited by Turkish families. The 51-year-old Bahide Arslan and her granddaughters Yeliz Arslan (10) and Ayşe Yılmaz (14) were killed. Nine other people were injured. The perpetrators, who were 19 and 25 years old at the time, were sentenced to ten years' youth imprisonment and life imprisonment for three murders. Both have now served their sentences.
